Behaviour before systems

Joan MacMillan

Director, Cammac Learning Evolution Inc.

Current health and safety management systems (HSMS), hazard assessments and hierarchy of controls significantly benefit occupational health and safety (OHS). Despite this, they alone are simply not enough to keep up. It's a vital element of our organizations, but we fail to appreciate one of the most important components—our people. Join Joan as she discusses how society has evolved, the change in workers' expectations and the limitations of traditional methods. In this session, you will learn how to: Put human behaviour first Develop the "us" within your organization Consider and implement people-driven alternatives

What it really takes to achieve continued success

Angus Reid

Motivational speaker and former CFL player, CenterSpot Consulting Corp.

Join Angus Reid for a presentation on what it really takes to achieve continued success. The odds of becoming a professional athlete are staggering. And it is rare for any football player to survive 13 years after beating those initial odds. Angus Reid is one of those players. As well as playing the game longer than most, Angus was also a captain and multiple-time B.C. Lions all-star. During his career, they won two Grey Cup championships and his team was one of the league's best. Angus accomplished this without any of the prized attributes generally considered essential. Coaching and guidance ...

Closing keynote: Disruption DNA

Closing keynote and closing remarks

Shawn Kanungo

General partner, Queen & Rook

Join us in closing off the 2022 ACSA Conference with none other than, Shawn Kanungo! Disruptors see the world differently. They bring unique viewpoints, technologies, talent and ideas from all over the world. Building a Disruption DNA within organizations requires us to abandon the set of ideas and practices that may have made us once successful. To build both mindset and muscle around disruption, individuals and teams need to take control of their own destiny. It requires us to make bold decisions in a world of uncertainty. How do we reinvent ourselves? How do we start building our Disruption DNA? ...
